MISS HOWARD'S OPINION.

She Thinks the Indian Question Will he Settled Shortly. New York, Dec. 22.—Miss Grace How-ard, daughter of Joe Howard, the wellard, daughter of Joe Howard, the well-known newspaper man, has just returned to New York from Crow Creek, Dakota. She says that the Indian troubles cannot fail to be settled very soon. The principal obstacle in the way of an immediate settlement lies in the lower white element, with whom is the responsibility of the whole disturbance to an extent not generally known in the East. These people welcome the troops in the country for the reason that it puts money in circulation.

MR. COLEMAN'S QUESTION

IT WAS HYPOTHETICAL AND THE PROSECUTION OBJECTED.

Whereupop a Lengthy Argument Ensued.

A Man Who Acted as Wgrd Did, According to the Testimony, Would Be Insane, Dr. Kempster Says.

drinking, the latter the consequence of an absence from drink after a long continued drinking. It would be difficult to tell when the crisis had come in the disease of mania a pots, but when it was apparent that the patient was suffering from fail-lucinations he could be considered clearly under the domain of the disease. The doctor based his belief that Ward was suffering from the disease upon the facts detailed in the first question asked him.

"Has not such a man," asked Judge Hoge, "always a certain intelligence which enables him to take care of himself."

"It to a certain point be has," replied the doctor. The attorneys of Frank Ward are now searing the close of their defense, and it s very probable that the testimony in fais very probable that the testimony in favor of Ward will be imished to-day.

The defense have prepared a number of lengthy-puestions embracing a hypothetical case simular to that of Ward s and including all the insane actions of the accused to which witnesses have testified.

These questitions will be propounded to day to experts on mind discusses, who will be required to give their opinion of the samity of the tunn whose-position deeds are related therein.

After the defense has been closed the Government will introduce rebutting testimony, which will be followed by the arguments.

timony, which will be followed by the arguments.

The argument for the Government will be opened by Mr. Claggett and closed by District-Attorney Hege. Judge Wilson and Senator Blackburn will deliver the arguments for the defense. Mr. Wilson speaking first. It is stated that the case will be ready for argument some time to-morrow.

To-day's proceedings were opened by Judge Wilson, who called the Court's attention to the fact that he had asked to retain Officers Hamilton and Hughes for further cross-examination, when they were first called, regarding what Ward and when he was arrested, but instead of that would read the testimony given by Mr. John Drew upon the hearing for bail, Drew is now sick and unable to attend court.

Mr. Hore objected to the testimony

Drew is now sick and unable to attend court.

Mr. Hoge objected to the testimony being read and the matter was not further pressed at this point by the defense.

The first witness called to the stand this morning was Dr. Walter Kempster, and a short delay occurred, during which Judge Hoge read over the first of the theoretical questions prepared by the defense. Judge Hoge objected to the question on the ground that it contained the assumption that the evidence embraced in it was not before the Court and jury. There had as yet been no rebutting testimony introduced by the Government, and the question in itself was such a direct and leading one that it could only be answered affirmatively.

Mr. Hoge these read samous objections duced by the Government, and the question in itself was such a direct and leading one that it could only be answered affirmatively.

Mr. Hoge then read various omissions which he found in the jucidents of Ward's insanity detailed in the question. Among them was an omission to state that when Ward threw his money around it was always among friends in a saloon after he had been drinking, and that the money was always returned to him. Judge Hoge also discovered an omission in the account of Ward's action at the Rigg's House, when he was presented with a bill for $25 by Officer Hewes.

Discrepancies were also found in the calman adventure, the drive with Mades to the Smithsonian grounds, Mr. Thomas' testimony and other incidents detailed in the question. One fact which Judge Hoge called particular attention to was the omission to state that the witnesses never said that Ward had detician treases, but that he was on the verge of that disease. The question also failed to state that Ward had played a skillful game of billiarus, just before the shooting of Adler, when he was supposed to be under intense nervous excitement.

Judge Hoge read a second question submitted by the defense to which he strongly objected. This question detailed the shooting of Adler when he was supposed to be under intense nervous excitement.

Indee Hoge read a second question submitted by the defense to which he strongly objected. This question detailed the shooting of Adler by Ward according to the view of the defense and then required the witness to answer whether Ward's actions on that occasion would change the opinion of his sanity given in an answer to the first question.

In conclusion Judge Hoge said that the gravest objection to a hypothetical question was that it placed the witness would in fact be delivering a verdict.

Senator Blackburn, in reply to Judge Hoge's objections, said that they, were frivolous and petty. If the theoretical question was that they lead to hypothetical question for the prosecution, encluded the witness, full

Justice Bingham considered the admission of the hypothetical question at some length. He had found the rule of law, he said, to be that an expert could not be allowed to give his opinion in answer to a hypothetical question unless all the evidence was contained in the question, and not such portions of it as were suitable to the defense or Government, as the case might be

His opinion, the Justice said, was that all the evidence, if not rerbatim, at least as full as possible should be embraced in typothetical questions regarding insanity, as only the statement of only some of the facts would not fairly present the question to the expert.

as only the statement of only some of the facts would not fairly present the question to the expert.

—Senator Blackburn raised the point that it would then be necessary for the expert to be present when the witnesses gave their testimony and to judge of the value of the evidence of each witness. There was also a great difficulty, the Senator suggested, in securing all the testimony already given. No minutes had been taken of all the testimony. The defense had a stenographer, but he was not recognized by the Government. The recollections of counsel differed, and the testimony could not be remembered in that manner. The result would be that the trial would be drawn out to an indefinite length while the stenographer prepared all the testimony. Then it would have to be submitted to the expert and discussed in every minute detail.

Messrs, Coleman and Wilson also took part in the discussion. The latter claimed that the testimony had expert would give in answer to hypothetical questions was merely testimony, and its truth or untruth would be weighed and decided by the jury.

Judge Hoge, however, said that expert testimony was not like ordinary testimony. It has fearful effect upon the opinions of a jury, and hypothetical cases should therefore be so constructed as to contain all the evidence given by witnesses.

—After discussing the question for nearly contain all the evidence given by wilnesses.

After discussing the question for nearly two hours, Justice Bingham decided that the defense should be allowed to submit one hypothetical question of a man's insanity, similar to that of Ward, to the expert, who would then be cross-examined by the prosecution. The defense would then submit another question for the expert's opinion, and the process continued until the expert had given his opinion and been cross-examined on each question. intil the expert had given his opinion and been cross-examined on each question.

Mr. Coleman then read the first theoretical question, which had been reconstructed since Judge Hoge objected to it, and propounded if to Dr. Kempster. This question embraced all the queer actions of an imaginary person identical with Ward's, and concluded with asking the opinion of the expert with regard to such a man's sanity and irresponsibility, when he shot another person on the 18th of June, 1889.

he shot another person on the 18th of June, 1889.

Dr. Kempster: "That question describes a man who was suffering from meals a pota, or in English, madness from drink, caused by excessive indulgence in alcoholic liquors. In my opinion such a man was irresponsible for any of his actions."

At this point a recess was taken until 1 o'clock, as the presention desired a little time to prepare for cross-gramination of the witness.

The second question put by Mr. Coleman was: "Would the fact that a man who had performed all these peculiar actions detailed in the first question, come into a saloon and shoot another man in the manner which Ward shot Adler change the opinion which you gave in answer to the Judge Hoge then proceeded with the cross-examination.

The general effect of monda a pots upon the mind, Dr. Kempster said, depended upon the nature of the individual.

Judge Hoge then put the case of a man of Ward's disposition, good natured and a lover of practical jokes, etc. Dr. Kempster replied that each an individual might become morose, but there was no general rule. The witness explained the difference between manda a pote and delirinal fremans.

He hesitated forca moment, but, as he could see no one in sight, he concluded that it was wise got to give an plarm. cross-examination.

The general effect of manks a posts upon the mind, Dr. Kennyster said, depended upon the nature of the individual.

Judge Hoge then put the case of a man of Ward's disposition, good natured and a lover of practical jokes, etc. Dr. Kennyster replied that such an individual might become morose, but there was no general rule. The witness explained the difference between manks a posts and deligious trule. The first was the result of protracted

"Up to a certain point he has," replied the doctor.

Judge Hoge then asked if this intelligence would not exist when a man under the influence of liquor throws his money around, particularly among friends.

Dr. Kempster admitted that it might if he only exhibited a small amount of money, but the throwing around of such large amounts as Ward was accustomed to do indicated the lack of that intelligence.

Dr. Kempster admitted on cross-examination that Ward's drive to the Smilisonian grounds could not be considered at indication of his disease. The witness was then cross-examined as to the insuity indicated by Ward's threatening to counit suicide.

"Have you any idea of the statistics of men affificted with business troubles who were not addicted to drink or any bad habit, but committed suicide on account of these troubles." The doctor answered that there were such cases and admitted that there was no insunity indicated by them.

of these troubles." The doctor answered that there were such cases and admitted that there was no instanty indicated by them.

On further cross-examination Dr. Kempster said that menic a pote did not deprive the patient of his reasoning faculties. It would not prohibit a man from keeping an appointment made at any place, and particularly at a barroom, because the patient would be more likely to remember to go to a place where he could get that which he cared for—drink.

Judge Hoge continued to cross-examine the witness on each of the incidents detailed in the question. The incident of Ward advancing memey for a cargo of ice which he couldn't utilize, the witness believed, indicated menic a pots.

The Doctor was then cross-examined on the second question, and said that Ward's going to the saloon and shooting, under the circumstances, did not indicate a determination in the mind of Ward. He was undoubtedly acting under hallucinations. These delusions would be caused by drinking even a little wine or beer, providing that the patient had previously undergone a long system of "soaking."

The delusions which the doctor mentioned upon cross-examination were the following. Of an imaginary wagon, the men which Ward was suffering would not necessarily produce delicions tremens. Among the delusions which the doctor mentioned upon cross-examination were the following. Of an imaginary wagon, the men which Ward thought were pursuing him at the Riggs House and the clam incident at the wharf.

"Does not the use of irrearms invove something else than the wantonness of a maximan, some motive or some reason?" asked Judge Hoge.

Dr. Kempster replied that such was not the case, as the defusions under which the patient suffered might be the cause of the use of firearms.

"The Doctor replied that all the incidents of a man's life must be taken in reaching of a man's life must be taken in reaching of a man's life must be taken in reaching a man who is irresponsible and one who is not ??"

The Doctor replied that all the incidents of a man's life must be taken in reaching such a conclusion.

Judge Hoge then gave a hypothetical case, representing Ward's relations with Adler, and cross-examined Dr. Kempster regarding the motive which they would furnish Ward for killing Adler.

The witness thought that in a sane man such a motive might have existed, but Ward was irresponsible, being under the influence of hallucination.

On cross-examination by Mr. Clagett Dr. Kempster said that a person suffering from manic a pote retained his reasoning powers and could distinguish right from wrong.

The disease could be cured without any powers and could distinguish right from wrong.

The disease could be cured without any treatment if the patient would leave drink alone. The Doctor then gave technical definitions of defusions, illusions and hallacinations. Eccentricity, the Doctor said, is no evidence of insanity.

On redirect examination Dr. Kempster said that if a man-of Ward's character shot another man for a small offense it would faise some suspicion of his sanity in the mind of an expert.

At 2:30 c'clock Dr. Kempster's testimony was closed, and Surgeon-General Hamilton, U. S. A., was called to the stand. Dr. Hamilton testified that he was present at the autopsy performed on Adler's body.

The corpse, he said, was extremely emeciated, and there were several bed sores on it. He saw the upper portion of the spinal cord, and so far as he could see discovered no injury to the cord.

On cross-examination Mr. Clagett asked Dr. Hamilton whether the operation per-

Dr. Hamilton whether Judge Wilson objected to this question and stated that the defense had no intention of going into that feature of the tion of going into that feature of the case.

Mr. Coleman said that in order not to delay the trial longer than Christmas, the defense had decided not to introduce any evidence upon the subject of the treatment of Adler.

Mr. Clagett then asked that the testimony of Drs. Morgan, Norton and Hamilton given as to Adler's condition should be stricken out.

The defense objected to Dr. Hamilton's testimony being stricken out, but Mr. Wilson objected on the ground that Dr. Hamilton's testimony would be necessary to show that the ball first struck some other substance before striking Adler's neck.

The abandonment of the malpractice line of defense much surprised Judge Hoge who indignantly stated that it left the presecution powerless to eliminate the medical testimony from the minds of the jury, although it could be stricken from the record.

The Latest Things in Manners and Press.
From "Manners Good and Bad at Home and in Society," recently published by Frederick A. Stokes & Co., the following and in Society, recently published by Frederick A. Stokes & Co., the following excerpts are taken:

"It is no longer good form to invite a young woman to drive, to go to any place of amusement, or indeed anywhere without first asking permission of her chaperon and then inviting both, provided the elder person accepts for her daughter or protegee. The chaperon is allowed to suggest an agreeable substitute for herself if she is engaged or is disinclined to be of service to the young people.

"This recent innovation in American etiquette has been the most disagreeable of any social rule that has been adopted from foreign usages. Its wisdom is resognized by those who suffer most by its exactions, the chaperon of society. These women are the real martyrs, living over again, as they must, a life with which they were long ago-satiated, smilling in the face of all the world, pretending to enjoy plays which their intellects have outgrown, and deafening their cars to the chatter of the young people, which under the most favorable circumstances must grow tedious often. Oh, the poor chaperon! It is the worst possible manners not to be gratefully attentive to her."

The revival of Indian troubles offers a suggestive occasion for calling renewed attention to the bill introduced by Judge

The Duke d'Anxy.

From the New Pork Sun.

If the Duke d'Auxy loves this town, he must be a patient and benevolent nobleman. For several years he lived at the New York Hotel, where he was almost companionless by reason of the fact that he knew no English. He and his wife were objects of deep interest to their fellow guests, and some audacions young women were in the habit of teaching his Grace American slang, under the pretense of furthering his education in English. The wife's suit with the relatives of her first husband got the pair frequently into the papers, and, upon one occasion, it was intimated in print that the Duke had acquired his title by parchase. This brought an indignant denial from the Duchess, accompanied with the declaration that her husband's title was one of the oldest in Belgium. After the suit had been disposed of earne the birth of a daughter, and with it more publicity. Then the Duke's brother died, and this got into the papers, and finally came the accusation of the Staten Island hotel-keeper. The Duke himself is a familiar figure on Broadway. He is a rather noticeably. The Duke d'Anxy. Duke himself is a familiar figure on Broadway. He is a rather noticeably, tout, high-shouldered, well-dressed man, with eye-glasses and moustache.

And most effectively is this thought plettured throughout, and most estimal does it find expression and illustration in the off recurring calamities that beset the hapless here and hereine.

The overture, a carefully written epitome of the musical story foreshadows all that is to come and tells the satisfie of ruin and digrace with many a crash of brass and most of the wood wind choic, and with this the currian rises.

In the semi-recliative religious chant with which the scene opens, partly a capella and partly accompanied by the organ, Smareglia shows good acquaintance with charch music, but he has covered it all with theatre timed and robbed it of much of its grandeur by adapting it to the purposes of the playhouse.

In the second act comes all the brightness of the score, The ballet music is written with the true Hungarian rhythm and cadences, and shows the influence of the composer's long visit to Hungary.
